Lecture

Writing Research Articles in English as a Second Language: Burdens, Solutions, and Responsibilities

以英文為第二語言進行學術寫作之負擔、解決方案與職責

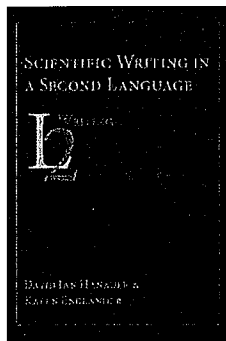

Monday, January 6, 2014, 10:00 - 11:00 AM

National Chengchi University Administration Building

Dr. David Ian Hanauer

Professor of Applied Linguistics

Indiana University of Pennsylvania, USA

This lecture is about scholarly publishing and based on Dr. David Ian Hanauer's recent book, Scientific Writing in a Second Language. In this talk, Dr. Hanauer will introduce the studies conducted to understand the extra burden L2 writers face when publishing in English. In addition, he will address the implications of this burden and practical ways institutions can support scholarly writers in developing expertise in writing for publication in English.

This lecture will be of particular interest to second language writing researchers who are interested in English for academic purposes, while faculty and graduate students from any discipline who would like to better understand experiences of scholars who write in English as a second language will find it helpful. In addition, it will also be of value to administrators and those who are involved in creating and following promotion review regulations.

Workshop

Meaningful Classroom Writing in English as a Second Language
以英語為第二外語進行有意義的課堂寫作教學

Tuesday, January 7, 2014, 10:00 - 12:00
National Chengchi University Administration Building

Dr. David Ian Hanauer
Professor of Applied Linguistics
Indiana University of Pennsylvania, USA

This workshop is based on Dr. Hanauer's 2010 book, Poetry as Research: Exploring Second Language Poetry Writing, and his other scholarly publications on meaningful literacy in the classroom and arts-based research. He will provide a theoretical introduction and share practical guidance for using poetry writing with L2 writers.

The workshop will be of interest to English teachers and learners in general, not only those who are literature and poetry experts. Through his experience teaching both L1 and L2 writers, Dr. Hanauer has developed a way for anyone to experience poetry writing regardless of their experience with the genre. English teachers will be able to adopt this method into their classes and researchers can incorporate it into empirical studies exploring L2 learners' experiences.

Drawing from arts-based qualitative research methods, Dr. Hanauer has used poetry in his own research to better understand the experience of second language writers and students' study abroad experiences. He will share his approach to this cutting edge method by which deep understandings of L2 writers' experiences can be explored by students themselves so teachers and researchers can better appreciate their development.
